DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 33-34, and 36-39 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Berger et al. (Pub. No. 2003/0221156) in view of Datta et al. (Pub. No. 2004/0001428).

- With respect to claims 33-34 and 36-37, Berger teaches a method for adjusting the data rate of a data stream in a communication device such that the data stream is divided into at least one data block including transmission bits to be transmitted (see Fig. 2), comprising: forming the transmission bits from information-carrying input bits by an encoding process (a data stream from a communications signals is encoded with outer code see abstract);

removing specific transmission bits from a data block of the data stream for the adaptation of the data rate (e.g. deleting at least one bit from each symbol to achieve a desired data rate see abstract); removing the transmission bits according to a dotting pattern (e.g. the puncture in page 2 paragraph 17). Berger fails to disclose configuring the dotted pattern that 8 of 48 bits of the data block are dotted, and the 8 to 48 bits of the data block are bits 1, 2, 4, 8, 42, 45, 47 and 48. But Datta teaches the puncture routines (e.g. page 1 paragraph 17). Thus, it would have been obvious to person of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention was made to understand the puncture/dotting pattern is a technique for coding data to transmit in a high speed shared channel.

- With respect to claims 38-39, Berger discloses the communication device is one of a mobile radio transmission device or mobile radio reception device (e.g. Fig. 1 shows the stations 12 and 14).

3. Claims 35 and 40-41 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Berger et al. (Pub. No. 2003/0221156) and Datta in further view of Das et al. (U.S. Patent No. 7133688).

- With respect to claims 35 and 40-41, Berger and Datta disclose all the aspect of the claimed invention as set forth above but fail to teach wherein the transmission bits to be transmitted are transmitted via the HS-SCCH corresponding to the UMTS standard. Das discloses transmitting data via HS-SCCH (see col. 10, lines 25-28). Thus, it would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skilled in the art at the time of the invention was made to implement the transmitting data via HS-SCCH corresponding o the UMTS into Berger invention to transmit data in communication.

Response to Amendment

4. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 33-41 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Conclusion

5. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. See PTO-892
